BRYAN, TEXAS, JULY 23, 1910.
Hold-you-so's. The Eagle is not one of them.

The Eagle is like the boy whom the calf run over—it has nothing to say. Did you ever see the like of the

Oh, that terrible special session! But let's look on the bright side. Possibly our apprehensions are groundless.

The Grandview Tribune gives to the world this gem of thought: "The hater can no more be a Christian than the devil can be an angel." The smaller the soul the greater the hate.

For the first time in the history of newspaperdom in Brazos county, The Eagle gave the complete returns from the election in Brazos county the morning after.

The Galveston Tribune is most respectfully requested to exercise a little more care in giving credit and to observe that Bryan, not Palestine, is the metropolis of the Mesopotamia of Texas.

"It is charged that state rangers shot a man at Navasota because of the fact that he could not speak English," says the Mineral Wells Index. The statement is true with three important exceptions: The shooting was not at Navasota; it was not done by state rangers and the man shot could speak English plainly.

In every case where good men differ the man who asserts that he cannot be wrong therein claims to be superior to human frailty and fallibility. A man should believe that he is right and should follow the truth, as he sees it, but no man should without good reason impugn the motives of those who do not agree with him.

NOW FOR SOMETHING ELSE.

Texas has just emerged from the most protracted, strenuous and exhausting political contest that the present generation has yet experienced. In Brazos county the heat of the strife was intensified by the desperate struggles of well matched candidates for nearly every one of the county offices. Happily it is all over and the result in every case is decisive. There is therefore no reason for keeping up the agitation. Now let us turn to the other and more important duties that confront us.

Unquestionably the first of these duties is to perfect organization for the development of the resources of Brazos county, the promotion of existing institutions and the establishment of new enterprises that make for the upbuilding of Bryan. The Commercial Club is yet in its infancy. As yet only the hustlers, the "live-wires," the men of alert perceptions and enlarged ideas, have been brought to a realization of the advantage of co-operation and of the truth that co-operation without organization is impossible. There are yet many who do not appreciate the importance of this work. There is also the shirker—the man who makes excuses for failing to do his part. He can only be reached by creating a public opinion that will compel him to come out of his shell of prejudice and selfishness and bear his part of the expense. Thorough organization and hearty co-operation will speedily bring such important results that the man who holds back will find himself in an ever decreasing minority, and as a matter of policy will fall into line. The financing of every enterprise promoted by the Commercial Club will not be burdensome to anybody if everyone will bear his share of the burden according to his means, and to the benefits he receives from it.

The failure of enterprises for the public good heretofore has been caused by personal spite and factional jealousies. Thorough organization will remove these obstacles by bringing together the factionists and making them acquainted with each other. Organization means education. It removes false impressions and broadens a knowledge of men and things, without which co-operation is impossible.

The Eagle again calls attention to Emerson's maxim that no great undertaking can be accomplished without enthusiasm. In order to keep the fervor at a working heat, every meeting of the club should be made inspirational. This can be done by short, snappy speeches by practical business men and by reports of progress.

READY FOR BOYS CORN CLUB.

The Bryan Cotton Oil and Fertilizer Co. has made all arrangements to take care of the Brazos County Boys Corn Club. Cars will be in readiness to take out the band and the boys at 10 o'clock. Before going out Mr. Smith, the photographer, will take a picture of the boys, band and cars. Mr. Howell expects fully 200 boys to take part in the ride, the parade and hear Hon. Hatton W. Sumners, of Dallas. He is in receipt of a letter from Mr. E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, president of the Farmers' Congress, and Secretary T. W. Larkin, of Beaumont, congratulating him in taking an interest in the Boys Corn club and to assure the boys that nothing at the congress will be too good for them. Each boy is requested to bring along a straw hat with wide brim and a stalk of corn. Cars will leave motor station promptly at 10 o'clock Wednesday, July 27. Line of march will be through Main and agricultural buildings to the assembly hall. Not only ought the boys hear Mr. Sumners, but it will be a treat for everybody.

THE MELANCHOLY DAYS.

The melancholy days are come,
The saddest of the year,
The boy that made the fatal run,
To him the world seems drear.

Heaped in the bosom of his gloom
His prospects now lie dead,
His voice 'most silent as the tomb,
He scarcely lifts his head.

That happy smile of hope is gone,
He's in a different mode,
Would scarcely now shake hands with you
Though meet you in the road.

For mercy's sake don't joke him now,
He has no heart for fun
But kindly let him tell you how
He thinks the "trick" was done.

Where are those smokes and free
drinks now,
That lately were so good,
Which brought all men of every class
Into one brotherhood?

Alas! we pause just here to think—
They've sadly passed away,
And were you now to smoke or drink
You'd have the bill to pay.

The picnic and the barbecue,
They perished with the rest,
That ardent love for public stew
Now slumbers 'neath his breast.

He courted favor with the "pro,"
With "anti" just as well,
But now with him they both may go
To Houston or H—Hempstead.

And now when come the calm mild
days
For sure such days will come,
The bill collector calls around
Presents his little sum.

The new church man he calls also,
With his forgotten list,
And if your name is not on that
You'll find it sure on this.

And now he'd gladly kick himself
If he were but a mule,
Yes, kick himself almost to death,
For being such a fool.

Yet still, when come those hopeful
days—
Those days just two years hence,
We'll find him for a month or so
A-sitting on the fence.

Just then the heeler comes around
Whose friendship once he bore,
And says, old boy you must get down
And make the race once more.

And then we'll find him on the track,
His pockets full of chink,
The smile of hope has now come back,
Come boys, and take a drink.

JOE McGEE.

Fine Art of Letter Opening.

In Russia one letter in every ten, passing through the post is opened by the authorities as a matter of course. Indeed, the postal authorities of every country have experts who have missed letter opening to a fine art. Some kinds of paper can be opened without leaving any traces, and this simple operation is finished by re-bushings the flap with a bone instrument. In the case of a soft matrix is taken by means of new bread before breaking the wax. When other methods fail the envelope is placed between pieces of wood with edge projecting one-twentieth of an inch. The edge of the envelope is first flattened, then roughened and finally set open. Later a hair line of strong white gum is applied and the edges united under pressure.—London Chronicle.

Charity and Prudence.

The contradictions of life are many. An observant man remarked recently that he was prowling about a certain city square when he came upon a drinking fountain which bore two conflicting inscriptions.

One, the original inscription on the fountain, was from the Bible, "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Above this hung a placard, "Please do not waste the water."—Youth's Companion.

Stewed Deers' Horns.

Deers' horns when young may form a dish for human consumption. Sir S. W. Baker writes, "When the large horns of the sambar, or wapiti, are growing they make an excellent dish, first scalded to divest them of down and then gently stewed with a good sauce and a few vegetables."—London Mail.

Poison In Young Rattlesnakes.

Observations on live rattlesnakes show that the poison glands become functionally active as soon as the snakes begin to shift for themselves, which must be very soon after birth. Experiments on the young ones six days after birth proved the presence of venom in small quantities. Experiments made three months after birth showed that considerable venom is secreted, as a pigeon inoculated at this time died in two hours with the usual symptoms of chronic poisoning.

The English Pheasant.

It is claimed that the pheasant of the English preserves can trace its pedigree directly to the brilliant bird of the same species in Japan. About the middle of the nineteenth century a few live pheasants were brought from Japan and crossed with the common species. The result of this was, it is said, that a new race of birds was introduced, and the beautiful pheasant, with its iridescent plumage, was produced and naturalized as an English bird.

Goals of Fire.

"I thought," said he, "that those people treated you so badly, and now see! They invite you to their reception. Shall you go?"

"Why, certainly," said she. "Their inviting me showed they harbored no grudge against me for the way they treated me."—New York Press.
